Remote Speakers Crack

The AVPlayerRemoteSpeakersViewController class represents the view controller of the remote speakers view. This class has an embedded AVPlayerViewController, a playlist, and a dictionary object for the playlist. The remote speakers view is hidden by default. To bring it up, call -displayRemoteSpeakersViewController:. The user interface is a list of remote speakers, each of which is a list item, and each of which is a remote speaker. Remote speakers are added to the list of remote speakers by calling the -addRemoteSpeaker: method. To remove a remote speaker from the list, call the -removeRemoteSpeaker: method. To add a remote speaker to a playlist, call the -addRemoteSpeaker:toPlaylist: method. An AVPlayerController is not part of the view hierarchy of the remote speakers view, and the remote speakers view is not part of the view hierarchy of the player's view controller. Parameters: remoteSpeakersViewController - An object that is a subclass of the AVPlayerRemoteSpeakersViewController class. AVPlayList - An object that is a subclass of the AVPlayList class. The playlist is not automatically updated, but it can be updated using the -updatePlaylist: method. Parameters: playlist Returns: A playback object that is a subclass of the AVPlayer class. Discussion: This method makes the remote speakers view visible, and also makes the list view visible, so that the user can select a playlist. It also starts playing the playlist, if the playlist has already been created. It does not start the list view if the playlist was not created. The AVPlayer object will play its contents, starting at the current playback position. If the AVPlayer object is playing, the playback state will be set to "active". If the playback position is greater than the current playback position, the playback position will be set to the current playback position. Adds a remote speaker to the list of remote speakers, which is displayed in the remote speakers view. The remote speakers view is not automatically created. If a remote speakers view controller is already present, the remote speakers view will be replaced. Parameters: remoteSpeaker - An object that is a subclass of the AVRemoteSpeaker class. Returns: An object that is a subclass
