It was my boyhood wish in life, to be born as the eldest son. I never grew to have a full grasp of my mother's pregnancy. I only remember that it was wonderful, as being a piece of cake. I was born in December 1962, when my father was four years older than my mother. As I had indicated, I was born at the Royal Free Hospital, at 3 a.m., having been delivered by my father, a frozen doctor. His doctor wife, is almost twelve years older than him. I was born with half a head of hair, which my mother used to tease me about calling, 'Pore Mike.' What's most memorable to me about my childhood is at the age of ten, my father got a job managing an auto-glass repair shop, earning some extra money with his dreams of becoming a used-car salesman. Part of the income he made proceeded to buy me a brand new model Datsun. In the beginning he even immediately sold the car after a day. Even at the age of ten, I was well aware that he had bought the car for me to be proud of. I remember that I was even more happy when my sister, aged two years old than me, received the same model of car. My father soon changed the job, making him more involved in the auto garage where he still acts as a mechanic, from time to time. It was the mother of the baby in his arms who was the only one, who was able to get a few words from me. Her first words were, "'You're beautiful'". My name is Michael Thomas Jackson, they called me Mike. This wasn't the end of the story. In my seventeenth birthday, my father sent my sister some recording tapes, to learn how to play the guitar. At that time, I didn't have my own guitar, as I used to play the bass guitar. My father had a children's music department, on his garage where we would sing, dance and play, for hours. He would even buy us most of the music instruments. One was a

An Australian man who illegally crossed the border to Canada to visit his girlfriend is facing deportation after being arrested by authorities in British Columbia on Sunday. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police said they arrested the man in Surrey on Sunday, and that he will be returned to Australia without an opportunity to appeal his deportation. "RCMP officers with the Canada Border Services Agency (CBSA) were called to the area after the man crossed the border in Surrey, B.C., and then hopped over the second fence without a proper crossing card or ID," the RCMP said in a statement. "The man was arrested and taken into custody. He was later transferred to the RCMP detachment in Surrey. The CBSA will now be determining whether the man is required to be removed from Canada." He is the first foreign national to be caught and deported from Canada since the RCMP beefed up border security efforts in January in response to a number of stowaways' attempts to cross the border illegally. The incidents led to the arrests of more than 40 people in the weeks following. In the month of January alone, the RCMP arrested more than half a dozen people suspected of trying to illegally cross the border. Since then, the force has been staging increased patrols along the roughly 1,000-kilometre border with the United States and says it is prepared for more stowaways. RCMP last weekend stepped up their border security efforts after a man walked away from immigration officials in Surrey, B.C. After that incident, the force arrested and deported another 21 people. While most of the stowaways who were recently caught have returned voluntarily to their home countries, at least 10 have been formally charged with an offence, ranging from illegal entry to crossing in groups. On Thursday, a federal government spokesman said more than 3,000 people have been caught crossing the border illegally in Canada since the beginning of the year.
