Because of its rarity, there is no standard management guideline to handle such cases. Herein, we present a case report of a 65-year-old woman with an aggressive osteosarcoma of the right foot, including the tibia, the talus and the tarsal bones. Considering the proximity of the tumour to the major vessels of the lower extremity, we started a neoadjuvant chemotherapy before any debulking surgery. Even though radiotherapy could be performed, the adjuvant chemotherapy was stopped because of the major comorbidities. The patient died of the disease 4 years after diagnosis. Capsaicin induces apoptosis in papillary adenocarcinoma of the thyroid through caspase-mediated mitochondrial pathway. Chilli-derived irritant capsaicin is widely used in traditional medicine for the treatment of various inflammatory conditions. However, its mechanism of action is largely unknown. Capsaicin has been shown to induce apoptosis in some cells, particularly those displaying the capsaicin receptor. Tumors of the thyroid gland have no true capsaicin receptors. In this study, we investigated the effects of capsaicin on apoptosis in papillary adenocarcinoma (PTC) cells. Capsaicin dose-dependently killed the cells with an EC50 value of 0.54 mM. Capsaicin induced PTC cells to undergo apoptosis in a manner dependent on mitochondrial membrane potential (MMP). Capsaicin also caused a decrease in mitochondrial inner membrane potential (MIMP) and released cytochrome c from the mitochondria into the cytosol. The ability of capsaicin to induce apoptosis in PTC cells was sensitive to caspase 9 inhibitor z-bid-fmk.
