Pittsburgh Tribune-Review The Pittsburgh Tribune-Review (known as The Pittsburgh Press from 1892 to 1995 and The Pittsburgh Press from 1995 to 2019) is a daily newspaper published in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, USA, which also publishes its main website daily at www.pittsburghtrib.com. The newspaper was founded in 1883 as The Pittsburgh Press by American journalist and publisher William Wood and partners with the McGraw Publishing Company in 1916. On February 26, 2016, the McGraw-Hill Companies announced it had purchased the newspaper for $110 million. It had been purchased by Halifax International in 2006. On April 1, 2018, the Tribune-Review announced that its profits had been cut in half from the previous year, with the newspaper losing about $9 million. The cuts were made in order to respond to a corporate tax cut passed by Pennsylvania lawmakers at the start of the year. In the 2018-2019 fiscal year, the paper earned $3.2 million, marking a $1.3 million decline in profits. On April 13, 2019, McGraw-Hill announced it would close the paper and assign its staff to The Rocky Mountain News in Denver, the Arizona Daily Sun and MetroWeekly in Seattle, and the North County Times in San Diego. History The Tribune-Review was founded in 1883 as the Pittsburgh Press by William Wood and partners. In 1917, William's brother A. W. Wood and partners bought out William's partners and became part-owners and managers of the paper. In 1916 the McGraw-Hill Publishing Company purchased the paper, and operated it under its own name. In 2002, the Tribune-Review won two Pulitzer Prizes as part of a news reporting team. The Pulitzer committee honored the newspaper's coverage of the synagogue bombing in Pittsburgh on July 27, which earned them the award for Public Service for "courageously exposing the racist nature of the bombing, and exposing a community on edge." A year later the same team received the award for "their courageous and painstaking coverage of the Troubles in Northern Ireland, which offered a revealing portrait of that conflict". William Wood was named an "Ambassador of Good Taste" by the Pennsylvania Hotel and Restaurant Association in 1935. In 2018, The Pittsburgh Press was purchased by McGraw-Hill. In 2019, the Press was renamed The Pittsburgh Tribune-Review. Circulation At the start of the 2006-2007 fiscal year, the average daily circulation was 164,696
