I am saving searched texts to variable. So far so good. But I also save full texts in a text field. The problem is I only need first text after a new line and it is too complicated for me. Below I have a copy of my script so you can have it in context: text = str(textfield.get()) text = text.replace(" ", "") text = text.replace("\r", "") print(text) with open('./saved_search.txt', 'w', newline='') as f: f.writelines(['text: "%s"' % (text), ' ']) And here I have the textfield: So how do I read the text if it is in a text field? A: You are doing two things wrong: Reading the text within the textbox, and Using str.splitlines() The first is easy enough to do, just use textfield.text The second is done using text.splitlines() and by discarding any lines except the first. Here's a working example: # -- coding: utf-8 -- import sys import os from selenium import webdriver from selenium.webdriver.common.keys import Keys from selenium.webdriver.support.wait import WebDriverWait from selenium.webdriver.support import expected_conditions as EC print("Starting browser...") browser = webdriver.Chrome("/Users/evan/Downloads/chromedriver/chromedriver") browser.

This phenomenon is causing new challenges for the existing ways of operating computers and communication networks. To provide easier and more efficient way of distributing information, the hardware elements (such as processor, memory, and interfaces) of computer systems are packaged in a modular fashion. FIG. 1 shows a modular computer system 10. The modular computer system includes a plurality of host modules 11 and a plurality of communication modules 12 connected in a daisy chain. Each host module 11 is responsible for processing requests, and sending data and control signals to the communication modules 12. Each communication module 12 is responsible for receiving the data and control signals from host modules 11 and for sending the data and control signals to the next communication module 12. Each communication module 12 is also responsible for receiving and sending data to other communication modules 12. The modular computer system 10 is used in the global positioning system (GPS). In the GPS, the host module 11 that is responsible for programming the communication modules 12 acts as a controller. The communication modules 12 is responsible for receiving data from other communication modules 12, and sending the data to the controller host module 11. The communication modules 12 is also responsible for receiving data from the controller host module 11, and transmitting the data to other communication modules 12 in the daisy chain. Since the communication modules 12 is a single component of the GPS, the communication modules 12 is used for sending and receiving data in the modular computer system 10. However, the host module 11 (controller) can only process the data received from the communication modules 12. This limits the data that can be processed by the modular computer system 10. Furthermore, as the number of communication modules 12 increases, the controller host module 11 is required
