Detours, (2008) Jungle Book, (2016) The vision of many before them, storytellers live forever. Second Chance, (2000) The time is the early 1980s in a California suburb. Four boys and a girl are brutally murdered by a mysterious figure during an innocent game of Truth or Dare, but their spirits walk the earth seeking the murderer. Now the children return to haunt their killer in his second chance. The story begins in the year 1798, when the U.S. Army finds the corpses of four nameless and faceless Indian girls in a mass grave in the west woods of Connecticut. The three surviving sisters of the victims are immediately sent to a home in Westchester, Connecticut, where they are given the names Abigail, Tamar and Rachael, in that order. Father Tom visits the sisters at the home several times, teaching them the alphabet, and how to read and write, before one day the mother, a devout Catholic, returns to take her children. Father Tom wants the three young women to have a chance to live the life of normal women, but each believes she has a purpose to fulfill in this world. Over the following years, Tamar and Rachael fall in love with each other, but Abigail has become the devout best friend of a young woman, Chloe, who is preparing for the priesthood. Together, the three women live out their lives, but after Father Tom's demise, Tamar's cousin, John, an abusive alcoholic and violent vigilante, murders Abigail, but accidentally sets fire to the home, which is later blown up, leaving Tamar, Chloe and Rachael as the only survivors. After John's execution, a film crew comes to the house and interviews Chloe as she recalls the traumatic time when she, Tamar and Rachael were young girls and their lives were brutally taken away. The filmmaker is Leah, who is a woman of some means. Chloe's devotion to the three sisters and the fact that she has managed to do what most people think impossible, has made Leah want to contact Chloe and see if she, like her sister, believes that she has a purpose in life. The film crew then arrives at the house, where Leah's story of life and love intertwines with Chloe's memories of her own past. Chloe, like Leah, is also in love and has a large following.
