Instruments are in virtually every scientific discipline, and caused a delay in leaving the scene. He stated that he had been on vacation in the Seychelles Islands and had returned to the United States after two weeks. Trimboli further testified that he had received the 3" x 5" and 5" x 7" photographs shown to him during his deposition. According to Trimboli, he could not make a determination based on these photographs alone. He stated that he needed to see the decedent. -4 J-536041-16 The hearing proceeded for ten more days, and on January 8, 2015, the trial court entered its order granting the motion for involuntary dismissal. The court accepted the reasons provided by the emergency physician in support of his affidavit. Additionally, the court considered the medical expert's affidavit, the emergency physician's testimony and his reaction to the photographs, and the testimony of the decedent's family members, who did not testify at the hearing. The court also considered the certificate of merit filed by Plaintiffs in support of their motion for composition. In granting the motion for involuntary dismissal, the court stated, in pertinent part: A review of the medical expert's testimony at the involuntary dismissal[2] hearing indicates that he cannot testify to a reasonable degree of medical certainty regarding the cause of [decedent's] death. He reviewed the autopsy report and issued a report that

Q: pass arguments from public to private scope in angularjs controller I am trying to pass an argument from the scope (parent scope) to the controller. The argument does get passed, but the controller (child) does not seem to know about the argument, but would know if I set it in the app controller which is the topmost scope. Example:-

angular.module('myapp').config(function($locationProvider) { $locationProvider.html5Mode(true); });
angular.module('myapp').controller('mycontroller', ['$scope', '$location', '$window', function($scope, $location, $window) {
    $scope.$location.search('item=someitem').search('search') }]);
HTML:- A: search is not an argument to your controller, you need to pass it as a part of a result: Plunker angular.module('myapp', [])
.config(function($locationProvider) { $locationProvider.html5Mode(true); })
.controller('mycontroller',
  ['$scope', '$location', '$window', function($scope, $location, $window) {
    $scope.$location.search('item=someitem').search('search') }]);
{{ $location.url }} 6d1f23a050
